

Dr. Marlow Hearings

By Carl Graham

BOICEVILLE

A State Education Department official testified Thursday night that the renovation of the Onteora junior-senior high school still hasn't been given final approval and that the school district violated the law by starting construction without it.

Basil L. Hick, chief of the Bureau of Educational Planning, contradicted earlier testimony in the hearing of Dr. Frank M. Marlow before the Onteora Board of Education. A memorandum previously entered as evidence showed that Marlow notified the board that the project had been approved in Albany on July 8, 1975.

"Then the project was not approved on July 8 as Dr. Marlow indicated?" asked S. James Matthews, the board's special attorney for the hearing.

"It was not approved, obviously," Hick responded.

Hick's testimony highlighted the second night of the hearing in which the Onteora Board of Education seeks to remove Marlow from his position. Questioning still centered on the first of seven charges made by the board, in which they charge that Marlow's "lack of diligence" delayed the $100,000 renovation project, jeopardized approximately $40,000 in state aid money, and made it necessary to put up additional funds to complete the work.

"State law requires written approval by the State Education Department before construction can begin?" Matthews asked. "Yes, on all projects over $10,000," Hick replied. "Then the school district has violated the law?" "Yes, I would expect so."

Hick also testified that certain health and safety information not furnished by the district at the July 8 meeting had been submitted later in a letter, but that the letter, dated July 10, was not received at his office until Jan. 2, 1976.

"Do you regard the omissions as serious?" Matthews asked.

"They would hold up approval—they were that serious," Hick responded.

Hick also testified that:

- He has notified the board of education that the junior-senior high school will have to be completely rewired before the state will approve the renovation project.
- High school principal Carl Brown called his office in late October to find out what was needed for final approval, but that for a period of six weeks prior to that no one had inquired.

• In a Dec. 16 letter, his office told Brown, then the acting superintendent, that the additional $22,000 needed to complete the oft-delayed project had not been submitted for voter approval and that its legality was still in question, and that seven items of information about the project still were needed in Albany.

The second session opened with Donald Lawson, the board president, resuming testimony he was giving when the first session ended late Tuesday night. Lawson's lengthy session on the stand mostly involved attempts by Joseph Hill, to establish that Marlow had complied with the board's directive to keep it informed on progress of the project, with Matthews trying to establish that Marlow had not been diligent, as the board has charged. The two attorneys on one occasion drew a laugh from the audience of 150 with some off-the-record byplay. Unable to locate a memorandum, Hill borrowed Matthews's copy. "Don't read my notes," Matthews admonished. "Not unless I have to," Hill replied.

The hearing resumes at 7 p.m. Monday in the high school auditorium.

Buckley: Trim Government

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON

U.S. Sen. James L. Buckley came to town with some good news Thursday night. "Big Brother on the Potomac is listening to your complaints," he announced to a crowd of some 350 persons at the annual Ulster County Chamber of Commerce Installation Dinner at the Holiday Inn.

The bad news was that even if "Big Brother" does hear those complaints he probably can't or won't do anything about it. At least not soon. "We have so overloaded the federal horse that we no longer find a functioning government," Buckley said.

That proved to be the theme of his 20-minute address, the need for less government and more local initiative. "The great strength of this nation has never been in its government at any level but in its people," he declared.

Buckley painted a grim picture of big government in Washington, referring to the federal bureaucracy at one point as "a spreading monster."

He offered some statistics. The budget unveiled by President Ford earlier this week calls for spending of $394.2 billion for the next fiscal year. Buckley said when he took office in 1971 the budget was $211 billion.

Noting that the federal government, if the President's recommended deficit is held to $43 billion, will have run a total deficit of $120 billion in the past two years, Buckley warned that it would "crowd out" private capital and further retard economic recovery. "We need 15 million jobs," he said. "We need truly productive jobs and to do that we need massive private investment."

Buckley doesn't see those jobs coming if the private sector has to compete with the federal government (to the tune of $120 billion) in the money market. He warned of another round of inflation. "Inflation is down to six per cent," he said. "Six years ago that would have been scandalous." He had a similar observation on the unemployment rate, down to around seven per cent. Four per cent was once considered "acceptable" by government economists.

"People ask 'why doesn't Congress do something about it?'" Buckley said. His answer is that Congress is too overloaded to adequately address the problems facing it.

"We have long since passed the point where we can cope with the burden of work thrown at us," he said. "We are no longer the world's greatest deliberative body. Eighty per cent of the time we are asked to vote on a measure we hadn't known the existence of 10 minutes before."

Buckley said there's an increasing reliance on congressional staff and "increasing delegation of the broadest regulatory powers to virtually autonomous bodies." He said that the Federal Register, which lists all the "rules, regulations and policies dictating to the American people," has tripled in size in the past three years, going from 20,000 pages to over 60,000 pages in 1975.

"We are increasingly spawning a government by fiat as opposed to a government by laws," he said. "It is a Frankenstein monster of our own creation."

Buckley doesn't think "procedural reform" of Congress is the answer but rather the "rediscovery of the principle of federalism, the natural hierarchy of responsibilities."

He went on to explain that what he meant was that the federal government should deal with federal problems and local governments should deal with local problems. "We've got to kick the habit of passing every buck to Washington," he said.

"Then we've got to take a blood oath never again to interfere in someone else's preserve." He was loudly applauded for that statement.

Despite the tenor of his speech, Buckley retains hope for the future of the nation as it enters its third century. "You have to be an optimist to remain in this job," he said later. "I have great confidence in the intelligence of the American people."

Buckley, who flew in from Washington for his appearance in Kingston, was driven up from New York City by Cong. Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-25th Dist.)

James Attenweiler was installed as president of the Chamber of Commerce, succeeding Richard Matthews, who had served two terms.

Mathews, before stepping down, presented "leadership awards" to Chamber members Richard Swoboda, Harry Gold, David Rylance, Howard C. St. John, Robert Dederick and Ethel Billups. Rylance, in turn, presented a Chamber award to Mathews.

Chamber Executive Vice President Len Cane served as master of ceremonies. The Rev. Robert D. Saccoman of Coleman High School offered the invocation and benediction.

Legislature Weighing Agency for Industry

By Lynn Mulvaney

KINGSTON

With improvement of Ulster County's eroding economy a high priority, the county legislature may very well move quickly on establishing an Industrial Development Agency to develop light industry as a source of employment and a means of broadening the tax base.

A special executive session of the county board has been called for 3 p.m., Feb. 5 at which industrial experts will brief the board on creation of an agency and sound them out on the proposal.

If sentiment leans toward establishing an agency then a resolution to that effect will be presented at the 8 p.m. session of the board.

New York State Department of Commerce spokesman Walter Halpern will address the legislature as will Harry Kaprelian, local industrialist and president of the Industrial Development Corp. and Al Ford, chairman of the Industrial Development Committee.

The agency's main task would be to promote economic welfare by developing economically sound commerce and industry through governmental action in order to prevent further unemployment and economic deterioration.

A study of the proposed Industrial Development Agency has been in progress since July when the county board voted unanimously to establish an Industrial Development Board.

Ford has since recommended to the county's Industrial Development and Publicity Committee that it recommend to the State Legislature that an agency be formed for Ulster County.

To date, 35 counties of the state have established similar agencies as have seven cities, 16 towns and three villages. The Town of Shawangunk in Ulster County is the only local town to form its own Industrial Development Agency.

The projects would be financed with industrial revenue bonds. Once created the agency would be in the business of seeking prospective tenants for property it may have acquired by purchase, lease, gift, grant or by condemnation.

An Invitation

The wind chill factor was 63 degrees below zero outside The Freeman office when pert Sue Williams dropped by in a modernized version of what the well-dressed Colonial lass was wearing during the Revolutionary War. If the weather outside was frightful, the statuesque beauty didn't let it deter her from putting her best foot (attached to a sluspy leg) forward to extend an invitation to a gala Bicentennial Fashion Show. Sponsored by Grand Union, the show, to be held Friday, Jan. 30 at 11:30 a.m. at the Turf Inn on Wolf Road in Albany, will feature models showcasing fashions popular in America during and after the Revolution. Sue, who probably remembered that Washington's troops were shoeless and sockless in the winter of 1777, didn't let the winter of 1976 bother her for one minus-zero minute.

UPI DATELINE

More NYC Problems

NEW YORK — In a grim "State of the City" message, Mayor Abraham Beame said New York City's attempt to save itself from default is in serious jeopardy because of the continuing effects of the national recession.

Beame said Thursday this year's budget deficit could be $89 million higher than anticipated because of unexpected declines in tax revenues and higher costs of welfare, energy and health insurance.

Troops Massed At River

LUSAKA, Zambia — Pro-Western forces massed their troops at a small river crossing in central Angola today to halt an all-out assault by Soviet-backed forces on their southern strongholds.

Military sources in Lusaka said the Soviet-supported Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola was receiving fresh infusions of Cuban soldiers to spearhead their offensive.

The Popular Movement Wednesday claimed its first victory on the southern front, allegedly driving pro-Western coalition forces and their South African allies from the towns of Cela, Santa Comba and Amboiva.

Six Killed In Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Roman Catholic and Protestant militants are killing people at the rate of more than one a day in 1976.

In the latest round of sectarian violence in Northern Ireland Thursday, six persons died, raising the death toll since New Year's Day to 34.

Death squads killed four persons in one incident and a booby-trapped gun killed two policemen and injured four others.

MD Strike Grows

LOS ANGELES — A doctors' strike in Southern California appeared to be gaining strength today.

Thousands of general practitioners shut their offices Thursday and flocked to the support of specialists striking over increased malpractice insurance. More were expected to join today.

The strike now covers a six-county area of 33,832 square miles with more than 11 million inhabitants.

$16 Million For Florida

DAVIE, Fla. — The Florida Seminole tribe has accepted a federal government offer of $16 million for nearly all of Florida.

The Seminoles claimed they owned 32 million acres stolen from them by Gen. Andrew Jackson, and the offer amounts to 50 cents an acre.

The government proposal was made in a letter last week from Justice Department attorney Walter Kiechel Jr. of the land and resources division.

A Rejection At The UN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Both the United States and the Palestine Liberation Organization have rejected a draft resolution on Palestinian rights, sending Security Council members into private meetings to try and work out a solution.

Benin (formerly Dahomey), Guyana, Panama, Pakistan, Romania and Tanzania Thursday submitted as a working paper a draft that would have the Council recognize the Palestinians' right to a state of their own in the Middle East while guaranteeing Israel's security within its own borders.

The Missile Question

WASHINGTON — The White House is reconsidering its decision to stop building Minuteman III nuclear missiles and may keep the production line warm while it awaits an outcome of the strategic arms talks.

There are no funds in the fiscal 1977 budget to continue Minuteman production, but that would be no problem for several weeks when money would be needed to maintain component pipelines.

Yipes! It's Still Cold

Floridian Carol Kittner. . . it's warmth she counts. (Freeman photo by Haines)

KINGSTON
Old man winter has a howling success on his hands.

Not satisfied with dealing out temperatures down to 12 below during the night, he threw in 35 to 40-mile-an-hour winds to add to the woes of weather-weary residents.

If he was trying for a record, he made it. The Kingston City Engineer's Office reports that the minus-12 degrees recorded at 5:28 this morning broke the record for today. The previous record of minus-nine was set in 1970.

And while motorists struggled to get their cars going, schools delayed openings and everyone bundled up against the biting cold. Belleayre Ski Center reported, "excellent skiing conditions, Beautiful or not, we are going to get more of the same. More cold, more precipitation and more talking about it.

The weatherman predicts lows of zero to 10 below tonight but with diminishing winds.

Buckley Dead Center On Ford and Reagan

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON

New York's junior senator proved noncommittal on the candidacy of either President Ford or Ronald Reagan Thursday night, suggesting he could live with either one of them, but indications are he's leaning to the right.

Sen. James L. Buckley, speaking at a press conference following his address to the Ulster County Chamber of Commerce, said he felt Ford and Reagan were "very close" in ideology but without prompting pointed to his "close relationship" with Reagan.

There was another indicator. "I want to see the Republican Party field its strongest candidate," he said. Incumbent Presidents seeking re-election are usually their party's strongest candidates. "I'd be happy with either one of them as President," he said.

Buckley isn't yet a candidate for re-election—officially—but told the Freeman if he does run he'd like to go with the Republican nomination, in addition to the Conservative.

Buckley, elected on the Conservative ticket in 1970, is in fact an enrolled Republican and is a member of the Republican minority in the Senate. His aides allow that his election in 1970 was "something of a fluke"—liberal Republican Charles Goodell and Democrat-Liberal Richard Ottinger split the major party vote allowing Buckley to ride to victory in between.

It's the sort of thing that won't happen again in a hundred years," said one observer.

With that in mind, Buckley's campaign organizers are expected to push hard for the Republican nomination. Conservatives interviewed Thursday night feel he'd be "automatic" if he gets it.

I'm in basic harmony with the programs and policies of (recent) Republican administrations," he said. "I would anticipate having Republican and Conservative endorsement."

Buckley steered clear of politics during his formal address to the Chamber of Commerce of Ulster County Thursday night, but fielded a number of questions during a brief press conference afterwards. With one exception.

He had no comment on the employment of Marion Javits as an agent of the Iranian government. "That is a personal matter between Senator Javits and his wife and I wouldn't want to comment on it," he said.

The junior senator from New York took a centrist position on the subject of nuclear power which may have come as something of a surprise to some of his more Conservative supporters. Asked if he favored a moratorium on nuclear power-plant construction, Buckley replied, "no, I think that's going further than we need."

He ruled out any "vast expansion" of nuclear power plants primarily because technology hasn't been developed on waste disposal to an "absolute" degree of safety. "We can't (at present) handle large quantities," he said.

He anticipates a continued government monopoly in nuclear power. "The stuff is so dangerous you have to have government regulation," he said.

Finally, Buckley touched on the differences between his first campaign in 1970 and the one he will be facing this year.

In 1970 the issues were "social," according to Buckley. "The colleges were falling apart, people were burning flags, things like that," he said.

This year's issue will be the economy, he said, specifically, inflation and unemployment.

Buckley expects to be back in Congress come January, 1977. "I have great confidence in the good sense of the New York voters," he said.

Local Commissioner Against a Bigger Welfare Burden

Kramer, Carey Agree on Some . . . But

KINGSTON While Ulster County's Welfare Commissioner Bernardt S. Kramer goes along with some of Gov. Hugh L. Carey's recent proposals to cut a number of optional welfare services under the Medicaid Program, he doesn't want to see the local burden increased.

Earlier this week, Carey proposed that certain X-ray services, private duty nursing for inpatients and adult dental services be curtailed.

Kramer agrees that private duty nurses could be eliminated but feels X-ray use should be governed by each individual case and left to local discretion. He said he doesn't believe in taking X-rays promiscuously but would make exceptions if a person's life is in danger. As for dental services for adults, Kramer feels it should be left to the discretion of local dentists and he rules out cosmetic dental work, unless it is essential to the health of a patient, as in chewing problems. Ulster County Department of Social Services has a consulting dentist, Dr. Joseph B. Kearney.

As for Carey's call for cuts in the monthly allowances granted to childless home relief recipients, Kramer said he would go along with that pointing out that childless couple's responsibilities are usually not as great as other families. He said they are also free "to go around the countryside to look for work."

Carey anticipates that loss of state aid to counties under the 1976 budget will be offset by the welfare reductions but Kramer feels the state has a bigger tax base to collect taxes and that "the time has come for all to look around and see where they can make savings."

The commissioner said he would like local welfare districts have more discretion in programming and not have to automatically pick up the additional costs of constantly new mandates.

The state now provides 25 per cent of the county's welfare costs which Kramer feels is insufficient in view of the number of programs it mandates.

Bella Raps Con Ed Sale

BUCHANAN

The sudden and virtually unpublicized sale of Con Edison's Indian Point 3 nuclear power plant in Putnam County to the Power Authority of the State of New York has come under sharp attack by Rep. Bella S. Abzug (D-20th Dist.).

The Democratic Congresswoman, who represents portions of Manhattan and the Bronx, has called for an immediate investigation of the sale by state authorities. Ironically, her protests coincided with the revelation this week that a Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff member who was assigned to Indian Point 3 has resigned because of reported safety deficiencies at the plant.

Abzug, however, dealt exclusively with the state's purchase of the plant in her recent remarks. She charged that state officials practiced "back-door negotiations" and withheld vital information from the public while completing the transaction last month. "The state legislature should examine the entire sequence of events in which the cooperation of state agencies was obtained to expedite the sale and avoid the issues of safety, environmental consequences and social cost and corporate baillouts," said Ms. Abzug. "Procedures should be developed to ensure that the legislature is informed of changed circumstances, and is a party to continuing negotiations."

The congresswoman suggested that an investigation would show that Con Edison waged a "systematic campaign of deception," while the power authority "continually withheld information from the public" in order to effect the purchase of Indian Point 3.

Ms. Abzug said that in December Gov. Hugh Carey defended the purchase as necessary to prevent Con Ed from possible bankruptcy, but a few days later Con Ed itself said the sale was "not financially necessary."

Ms. Abzug has asked Assemblyman Daniel Haley, (D-112th Dist.) chairman of the Commission on Energy Policy, to direct "a full legislative probe" of the sale. One of her concerns, she said, is the possibility that PASNY will have to sell bonds to finance even more than the announced $600 million purchase price, since historically there are "hidden price tags accompanying all nuclear generating plants."

The Indian Point 3 plant became further embroiled in controversy this week when Robert Pollard, assigned by the NRC to monitor safety systems at the nuclear plant, leveled allegations that criticisms regarding reactor safety have been ignored by the NRC.

Specifically, Pollard said the diesel system at Indian Point 3 is vulnerable to damage. The diesel system provides back-up power to emergency control equipment in the event that normal power fails. Failure of the diesel system could lead to an uncontrolled reactor core melt down.

The NRC has reportedly begun an investigation of Pollard's accusations.

Marlboro Man Sentenced

KINGSTON

Angelo Arellano Jr., 43, of Marlboro, was sentenced Thursday in Ulster County Court to a prison term with a maximum of eight years on a charge of first degree manslaughter.

Arellano was convicted in November on the charge in the stabbing death of George Bolduc, 61, of South Road, Milton, on March 26, 1975.

Arellano, who was represented by attorney Michael Federoff, faced a possible prison sentence of up to 25 years on the charge.

At the time of Arellano's arrest, authorities said he attempted to gain admittance to Bolduc's home and, when refused, allegedly pushed Bolduc to the floor and stabbed him. Arellano's common-law wife, who was at the Bolduc residence when the stabbing occurred, had been scheduled as a major prosecution witness, but could not be located to testify at the November trial.

Arellano was sentenced by County Judge Raymond J.

Mino, who presided at the trial. Assistant District Attorney John Modjeska represented the People during sentencing.

A Library Review

KINGSTON

Mrs. Sharon Elswit, Kingston Area Library's children's librarian, has announced that there will be a preview opening and "fire sale" at the temporary children's facilities on Saturday, Jan. 24 from noon to 3 p.m. The collection will be located on the second floor of the Millard Building, 110 Prince Street.

Mrs. Elswit reports that temporary shelving has been delivered and a new telephone is being installed. Almost all books have been cleaned and moved to the Millard Building. However, Mrs. Elswit has put out a call for more volunteers to clean furniture, put books on shelves, make signs and start reconstructing the card catalog. Work will be continuing next week (with the exception of Tuesday) and even after the preview opening and fire sale.

Beginning with Jan. 28th, library hours will be 3-5 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m.-3 p.m. on Saturday. Staff and volunteers will be working at other times to finish the clean-up and reconstruction process. As soon as this process is completed (in approximately three weeks), spring programs will be started and regular hours resumed, she said.

Gradual Withdrawal Major Test of Shaky Lebanon Cease-Fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Christian and Moslem gunmen today upheld a shaky Syrian-backed cease-fire, despite occasional exchanges of rocket and machinegun fire. In Beirut, a skirmish during the looting of a supermarket killed six persons. The state radio said all parties were "generally abiding by the cease-fire," although most political observers agreed it was too early to tell if the hours-old truce would eventually take hold or collapse like the 25 previous ones.

Hopes the truce will succeed rest largely on the Syrians. Most diplomats agree this is Syria's last hope of arranging peace short of a full-scale military intervention that could touch off a war with Israel.

Moslem and Palestinian forces controlled at least two-thirds of the country when the cease-fire went into effect at 8 p.m. Thursday.

The major test of today's cease-fire was the agreement by rival factions to gradually withdraw from captured territory.

Fires erupted throughout the shattered capital, but were quickly brought under control. Blazes broke out at the headquarters of Beirut's riot police and near a munitions dump.

A fire in the outskirts of the capital engulfed Spinney's supermarket, which was ransacked by hungry looters trying to grab food during the lull in the nine-month-old civil war.

Units of the Palestine Armed Struggle Command, the Palestinian police force, fought with the looters. Six persons died and 13 were wounded, police sources said.

Photographers at the scene had their films confiscated.

Another blaze in the downtown commercial sector swept through the Intra Bank building, which houses the offices of several foreign firms including British Airways and the Australian airline, Qantas.

The crumbling capital has been the site of some of the heaviest fighting in the nine-month war that has left 10,000 dead and 20,000 wounded.

Moslem and Palestinian leaders welcomed the agreement. Christian leaders, in a cautiously worded statement, said they would abide by the cease-fire but made it clear that talks on political reform must wait until security is restored and the truce put to the test of time.

Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam and chief-of-staff Maj. Gen. Hikmat Chehab arrived in Beirut Wednesday to discuss cease-fire terms with President Suleiman Frangieh.

As they met, thousands of Palestine Liberation Army troops from Syria led Moslem forces in a sweep through northern and eastern Lebanon.

They advanced 20 miles through the Bekaa Valley into the eastern ranges of Mt. Lebanon and 35 miles down from the northern Syrian border to Tripoli.

There they halted, but the threat they might advance again and squeeze Christian forces into a circle around Beirut gave the Syrians the necessary leverage to impose a settlement on recalcitrant Christians, government sources said.

The Syrian plan called for the cease-fire to be supervised by a six-man committee of two Lebanese and two Syrian army officers and two Palestinian representatives while Khaddam continues talks on reaching an overall political settlement, official Lebanese sources said.

Such an agreement would open the way for former Premier Rashid Karami, who resigned last Sunday, to form a new government and implement the political and social reforms demanded by Moslems, they said.

A brutal aftermath to the fighting was the discovery of a massacre of Christians by Palestinian and Moslem forces who overran their town of Damour 25 miles south of Beirut earlier this week.

When the leftists began pulling out of Damour Thursday, reporters found the bodies of dozens of women, children and elderly men slaughtered with hatchets.

"They were not fighters. They were all old people and children. They were lying in pools of blood in their homes and on the streets. They didn't have a chance," said one witness returning from Damour.

The massacre was apparently in retaliation for a similar attack on the Beirut slum district of Karantina by Christians earlier this week and was not the first committed by either side.

New Arms Formula Under Study

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — The United States and the Soviet Union have unexpectedly begun consideration of a new formula under which the strategic arms ceiling set by President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev at Vladivostok in 1974 could be reduced by about 10 per cent, a senior U.S. official disclosed today.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, apparently alluding to this development, told newsmen on leaving Moscow to brief NATO Foreign ministers in Brussels that Brezhnev had given him "constructive" and "significant" new ideas.

The senior official, speaking to newsmen aboard the Kissinger jetliner during the flight to NATO headquarters declined to explain the specific details of the new formula.

But he claimed Kissinger's Moscow arms talks had achieved the biggest single progress of any Soviet-American negotiating session in Moscow. The superpowers are trying to reach a long-term agreement from 1977 to 1985 to limit their strategic arsenals.

The Soviet Union currently possesses about 2,600 strategic missiles and bombers, while the United States has about 2,100. Under the new proposals the Soviet Union presumably would have to reduce its strategic arsenal by 400 missiles and bombers while the United States could remain at its present capacity.

The official said the United States originally proposed a formula involving restrictions on the Soviet Backfire B-bomber which could carry with it reductions of several hundreds of strategic weapons allowed the two superpowers. At Vladivostok, Ford and Brezhnev agreed Russia and the United States should place a limit of 2,400 on their arsenals of strategic bombers and missiles.

The ceiling might now be reduced to around 2,160 or 2,200, the official indicated.

Kissinger's reported progress on the strategic arms accord was tempered by his failure to persuade the Soviet Union to pressure Cuba to end its intervention in Angola.

Kissinger told Brezhnev, the senior official said, that continued Soviet intervention in Angola would produce a chill in U.S.-Soviet relations, would weaken incentives on the United States to exercise restraint in a variety of diplomatic situations, and eventually could undermine the administration's policy of detente with the Soviet Union.

In part because of Angola, Brezhnev's proposed visit to the United States still seemed uncertain. At Kissinger's departure, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko was asked if Brezhnev would go to Washington and he replied, "I do not know but certainly a signing will take place."

Kissinger's Moscow negotiations will now be followed up by further study in Washington and consultations through Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin. Kissinger may take another trip to Moscow, the official said.

The senior official attributed U.S. impotence to affect an Angolan resolution to the Congressional decision to cut off aid to democratic factions in Angola and the inability of pro-Western forces to stop Cuban forces on the ground.

While Kissinger was in Moscow, the strength of Cuban volunteers in Angola jumped from an estimated 8,000 on Monday to about 10,500 on Friday with more on the way.

The senior official said Brezhnev appeared to be in good health during Kissinger's seven-and-a-half hours of negotiations with him. Brezhnev did not look as if he was being poked and bantered.

At one point, another official said, Brezhnev sniffed a packet of cigarettes and put them down — just to prove he had given up smoking on doctors' orders.

U.S. officials said Brezhnev seemed in far better condition than when he met Ford in Helsinki late last July.

The U.S. official confirmed reports by another U.S. delegation member Thursday that the United States and the Soviet Union had reached a very precise definition of "light" and "heavy" strategic missile. This definition was left ambiguous in the 1972 strategic arms accord and has resulted in charges the Soviets have violated the "interim" five-year arms curb.

Gov. Carey's Budget

Who is Governor Carey trying to fool?

In attempting to reconcile conflicting claims of fiscal realities and political pressures, Mr. Carey has produced a new-model budget of $10.76 billion that falls considerably short of the ideal from either perspective.

While stating that for the first time since World War II days of Herbert Lehman, state spending will be cut back from what it was in the previous year, Mr. Carey turns the other cheek and includes the legislature's controversial "lulus" as part of the budget. That proposal is unbelievable.

Mr. Carey has proposed $882,500 for extra lawmaker bonuses—$537,500 for 103 positions in the 150-member Assembly and $345,000 for 63 positions in the 60-member Senate.

These bonuses are payments in lieu of expenses and the bigger payments generally go to political leaders. These "lulus" are added to the base pay of $23,500 and are calculated in pensions.

If, as Mr. Carey claims, he is balancing the budget, then it should be purged of such trickery. These bonuses, including one of $21,000 for the Senate Majority Leader, should not even have been considered in the budget.

Two challenges made last year against these "lulus" have been upheld by lower courts, one which charges the "lulus" are really an unconstitutional salary hike.

If our governor wants us to believe that his budget is going to reverse the financial plunge for state residents, he must first forget about those extra bonuses for our lawmakers. Most of them aren't earning the salary they're paid—without the extras thrown in.

Readers Write

Whose Fault Was It?

Dear Editor:

Most likely a second letter by the same person won't be used, but I'll thank you in advance for at least "getting it off my chest to someone." —So—here goes:

In regard to the letter in yesterday's Freeman by D. A. Elmendorf, I've read it, and re-read it several times, trying to decide whether or not to write again, and felt I just had to.

I was at the Public Hearing at City Hall the night it was held to try and determine the fault of the incident involving Mr. Keller and the Paid Dept., (saw you there too)—and found it very stimulating and interesting. I thought all the defense lawyers did an excellent job for their own clients, but since Mr. Elmendorf saw cause to criticize only the "other side", I feel it only fair to publicly inform those who were unable to attend, a few facts in the "game", as he called it, about my interpretations:—

First, I definitely would not call it a "game". If this is his personal impression, I pray he is not a member of either fire company—volunteer or paid!

Second, his criticism of the "word" of a man of God, or any minister, being questioned—in the very serious nature of the matter in question—WHY NOT? Are they not also human beings? Since Mr. Elmendorf voiced his comments, may I voice a few that I'm sure you'll remember hearing? If Mr. Elmendorf himself was not in that room, how dare he say "let's report the facts!" I certainly was not there either, but Mr. Keller's testimony "appeared" to me to be highly conflicting several times, as well as the testimony of the "surprise volunteer witness," who stated he was in the room "holding a light for the men to see." Mr. Keller changed his answer several times about how many men were in the room, how many times he was struck, and how long the incident lasted! My opinion again—if truth is being told, there would be no need to change an answer no matter how many times it is asked! And what did this "surprise witness holding the light" do while his fellow member was, in his words being so "viciously attacked" just sit there holding that precious light and watch, to be sure he saw the whole "round?"

One final question—and I'm sure if other volunteer companies were to be interviewed, they'd all agree and ask also—Why has only the company in question has so many other "clashes" with officials in charge?—I repeat—Why only this company?—And didn't they just a short time ago resign from the Volunteer Association?—If so, I don't think they have a right to protest or question any action of either paid or volunteer companies!

Most Sincerely,

MRS. K. DART,

Kingston

P.S. Again, thank you for taking the time to allow me at least to put my feelings in words to someone. It really does help!

In Agreement

Dear Editor:

I call your attention to two letters in the Kingston Freeman, "Death of a Taxpayer" on Dec. 26; and "Taxpayer Roast" on Jan. 4. I agree with every word Mr. Covitz wrote.

All levels of government must reduce spending immediately! Budgets must be set up with spending regulated not to exceed income.

Spending cuts should start with your salaries, expense accounts, office allowances, etc. Have you earned your salary? How much time have you spent "Mud-slinging", creating jobs to repay political favors, and devising tax loopholes for rich friends?

Too many families are being forced off the tax rolls onto welfare and unemployment. These programs are necessary but so is control of them. I resent recipients being able to eat and live better than my family. While we put off medical, dental and eye check-ups and pay toward their food stamps; they watch color TV, go to movies and bowling and have their hair done every week; all the time laughing at those of us who struggle along conventionally working for a living and paying our bills.

Prison reform and prisoner rehabilitation may be necessary but these people have committed crimes against society and they must be punished not rewarded and treated as a guest at an expensive hotel. Again, while we "do without" and pay, pay, pay!

Government must respond to the needs of the middle income taxpayer. We have tightened our belts as tight as we possibly can. Our budgets have been stretched to the breaking point. We have cut our fuel consumption in half but are paying twice as much for it; likewise gas for our car and food for our table. Our taxes have been raised and raised partly to cover the salary increases proportionately with your salary increases or more importantly ours has not increased proportionately to our increased expenses.

Earn your pay! Balance the budgets! Cut expenses! Punish the criminals and welfare frauds and cheats! Get rid of expensive unnecessary commissions and programs! Change old laws and make new ones but don't relax all year and rush everything through the week before recess or adjournment.

It is time for more responsible government.

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

GAY SAMMONS
Port Ewen, N.Y.

What About Civic Pride?

Dear Editor:

On a holiday week-end I spent in Kingston many years ago (I think it was New Years 1947-1948) fifteen inches of snow fell on the city one day. On a crisp, sunny day two days later I took a long walk and marvelled at the carefully shoveled sidewalks and crosswalks that had been cleared off so promptly.

What has happened to Kingston? Since I moved back here in 1971 I have noticed that the walks in front of many homes are never touched. I suppose there is a law that requires that walks be cleared within a specified time after a storm, but from the present condition of the streets in Kingston it would seem that no city agency takes the responsibility of implementing it.

Today, because of the protracted spell of freezing temperatures, many of these neglected sidewalks are hazardous beds of uneven humpy ice which it is almost impossible to walk on. Children have to walk on these sidewalks to school or to their bus stops, and many people who do not have cars have to walk to work or to the store to buy food. The alternative to the sidewalk is to walk in the street and risk being struck by a car. This can hardly be recommended for children.

Who pays the hospital bill if someone falls and breaks a hip? Again, who assumes responsibility for injury to a pedestrian struck by a car while walking in the traffic-way because the adjacent property owner has not taken care of the sidewalk in front of his property so that it fulfills its function as a walk-way for pedestrians?

What about civic pride? Thank heaven for those home owners who still take the same pride in the condition of their sidewalks as they do in their homes and gardens.

M. H. Ward,
Kingston

The Mail Monopoly

WASHINGTON (KFS)—Another battle between the forces of largeness and the forces of smallness has ended. The village of Rockport, Maine, has lost the long fight to keep its post office where it has been since pilgrim times. The post office had always been the center of the hot-stove social life during the long winters of short daylight.

Some official in the reformed, semi-public U.S. Postal Service determined that the old post office lacked the required number of square feet or some such and, after the protests of the inhabitants and the posturing of the elected officials, this decision was carried out. The episode in the tiny, Maine coastal hamlet won't surprise many who will take it as superfluous confirmation that government is a worthless, dirty rag.

What is surprising is that the people who run the country run the postal service as they do. Since the Year I of the Constitution, we have been a tribe who love the nation and hated the government that stands for it. The mail is the one activity carried out by the Federal Leviathan that everyone form age 10 onward comes in contact with. People who don't pay taxes, people who otherwise manage to escape the eagle's talons, get mail and send it. There has been more talk about the recent postage increase than about the income tax.

Hard-Hearted Honchos

But knowing that mail service may influence more people's opinion about the quality of government than any other single Federal function, the honchos go ahead, raise the price of a first-class letter 33 per cent and then start talking about cutting out Saturday deliveries, special delivery and lengthening the mail's arrival time.

When the old Post Office Department was abolished six years ago in favor of the present semi-public corporation, the country was told that "politics" had wrecked the mails and that the introduction of businessmen and businesslike efficiency would restore them. The reasons advanced weren't new. Businessmen would be better able to resist extortionate demands of unions and other businessmen for high salaries, subsidies and construction and equipment contracts.

It hasn't worked out that way, but then does it ever? Semi-public corporations, those much-raised partnerships between government and business, have seldom delivered on their promise. Freed of the need to come up with a profit for the stockholders, businessmen can be unconsciously worse than politicians. Some of the politicians' palaver about honesty and public service does, after all, rub off on their insiders, but the business ethic is anything goes as long as you don't go to jail.

The semi-public corporation, be it at the municipal or the Federal level, is the least responsive organizational form our society has yet devised. Politically controlled institutions are in some vague sense disciplined by voters; business used to be, at any rate, disciplined by having to show a profit; semi-public corporations are disciplined by neither, nor by anything else.

Maybe that's why the House of Representatives has twice voted to abolish postal reform and return to the older, unsatisfactory arrangements. There is another sentiment—still a decided minority—to let the Postal Service destroy itself, just abolish its monopoly so that somebody else can get into the business and compete by providing better service at low prices.

Sacrosanct Malarkey

One of the objections to allowing private business a whack at the job has been that the mails are sacrosanct. We know that's so much malarkey. The government reads our mail, and there isn't anything we can do about it. A private carrier who permitted such intrusions on his customers could be successfully sued.

The other objection is that private companies wouldn't service sparsely populated rural areas or less pleasant ones like the ghettos. If that turns out to be so, it would be cheaper to subsidize mail to those areas than continue what we do now, which is to subsidize Time, Newsweek and the junk-mail industry.

Despite some admirable lurches in the direction of deregulation, President Ford still appears in favor of using the semi-public corporation device in such huge fields as energy, health insurance and transportation. His myriad opponents agree. None of them recognize that as ye deliver the mail, so shall ye be judged.

Energy Czar Fought For Compromise Bill

WASHINGTON—Energy Czar Frank Zarb would have followed Labor Secretary John Dunlop out of the government if President Ford had vetoed the energy bill as he did the common situs labor bill.

Sources close to Zarb say he was ready to resign, effective in April, if he had been hit with a veto. For the doughty little ex-broker had spent months hammering out a bill which sets a new national oil policy.

Zarb worked 16-hour days to patch together a compromise. Even when his duties took him out of town, he set up extra phones in his hotel rooms and kept burning the wires to Capitol Hill.

The compromise bill satisfied no one, least of all the oil companies, but it was the best that could clear Congress. The oil barons made a final, powerful effort to pressure President Ford into vetoing the bill.

The showdown came on November 13 behind closed White House doors. The President called in top congressional Republicans to hear Zarb present his arguments against a veto.

He and his deputies, John Hill and Eric Zausner, ran into a hailstorm of opposition from conservative Republicans, some of them primed with arguments by the oil companies.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, made a vitriolic personal attack upon Hill, charging that he had undercut conservative Republican leaders on oil policy. More politely, Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., made the same point.

The President, who had backed Zarb, was shaken by the opposition. By the end of the two hour meeting, the conservatives were convinced the measure would be vetoed.

But the indefatigable Zarb didn't give up. He inveigled a ride on Air Force One for the first lap of the President's trip to China. All the way to Alaska, Zarb lobbied the President.

After Ford's return, Zarb kept it up until the President signed the bill on December 22.

Footnote: Zarb's closest friends confirmed that a veto would have brought his resignation. Zarb himself would tell us only: "The battle is over. I don't want to talk about it."

POISONED FIELDS: The field workers, who helped make America the best fed nation in history, are themselves often undernourished. Now there is evidence that they are also being poisoned by pesticides.

From California to Florida, crop sprays are bringing sickness and death to stoop laborers.

This had led Dr. Joseph Swartz, a biophysicist doing research for the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in California, to call field work "one of the most hazardous occupations." His conclusion is based on "time lost to occupational illnesses."

Poor living conditions and health hazards have combined to give the farm worker an average life span of only 49 years—21 years less than the national average.

Yet the EPA, which is supposed to be the nation's environmental watchdog, has failed to protect workers from the menace of sprayed fields. Here are the shocking facts:

—The National Farmworkers Information Clearing House (NFIC) has prepared a survey to determine the number of deaths and illnesses from exposure to pesticides. Yet EPA has not sent this vital health survey to 125 migrant health clinics.

—Under pressure from the growers, EPA also quashed an earlier NFIC project, the pesticide hotline, which would have provided a toll-free telephone number for field hands to report poisoning incidents.

—EPA has made only a token effort to enforce EPA regulations on the farm. Many farmers disregard the regulations and spray their crops with reckless abandon. Yet EPA has assigned only an average of one inspector per state to protect the public from poisoned fields. Even those farmers caught violating EPA's pesticide regulations risk no more than a warning for a first offense.

—For that matter, the EPA doesn't have adequate facilities to determine whether the pesticides it certifies for commercial use are actually safe. Instead, the agency relies almost entirely on the dubious data provided by the pesticide manufacturers.

One reason for EPA's failure to control pesticides is the power of the agribusiness lobby, which is more interested in protecting crops than workers.

The lobby has an extraordinary influence over the House Agriculture Committee, particularly its 76-year-old vice chairman, Rep. W. R. Poage. The old man grew up on a ranch in Throckmorton County, Tex., and he is more sympathetic with big ranchers than small stoop laborers.

The House Agriculture Committee has brought enough quiet pressure to bear on EPA, meanwhile, to prevent enforcement of the pesticide regulations.

The effect can be measured in stark human terms. Consider these reports, for example, from Florida.

—Last November ten field hands, three of them women, were hospitalized with severe nausea, skin rashes and dizziness after going into a sprayed tomato field.

—A farm worker at Del Ray, Fla., entered a tomato field after it had been sprayed with four different toxic pesticides. Thereafter, he developed a skin rash resembling leprosy and has been unable to return to work.

—In 1973, a woman stoop laborer left a field which had just been sprayed. She complained of nausea and shortness of breath. Thirty minutes later, she died.

Footnote: An EPA spokesman told us his agency lacked facilities to doublecheck adequately the pesticide industry's data. The EPA, he said, may release the NFIC survey in the future.

The spokesman conceded that the pesticide hotline had been canceled and that less than one inspector per state was assigned to check farm poisonings.

The Lost Art of the Wry Toast

I have known many.
Liked a few,
Loved one—
Here's to you.

Here's to the happiest hours of my life—
Spent in the arms of another man's wife:
My mother.

Here's to the girl who's always with it,
Who doesn't lose her head for a minute,
Plays well the game and knows the limit.
And still gets all the fun that's in it.

Here's to the girl in the high-heeled shoes,
Who eats your dinner and drinks your booze,
Who jollies you on and treats you right,

And sleeps with her mother every night.

Here's to the gladness of her gladness
when she's glad,
Here's to the sadness of her sadness
when she's sad;
But the gladness of her gladness
And the sadness of her sadness
Are nothing compared to the madness of her madness when she's mad.

Drink, drink, drink,
Drink to the girl of your heart;
The wisest, the wittiest, the bravest,
the prettiest,
May you never be far apart.

Drink to fair woman, who, I think,
Is most entitled to it;
For if anything can drive a man to drink
She's the one to do it.

We've toasted the mother and daughter;
We've toasted the sweetheart and wife;
But somehow we missed her,
Our dear little sister—
The joy of another man's life.

To marriage, that happy estate which resembles a pair of shears—so joined that they cannot be separated; often moving in opposite directions, yet ready to cut anyone who comes between them.

Here's to the wings of love;
May they never moult a feather,
Till my big boots and your little shoes
Are under the bed together.

The one I appreciated most goes:
"Here's to you—never above you, never beneath you, always beside you."
Wry toast . . .

In a Tougher World Meek Are Endangered Species

"As most of you out there in television land know, the Bible says that the meek shall inherit the earth. The big question for our guest of honor this week is, 'Will they?'"

"I'd like to introduce our guest, Mr. Franklin Muffin, head of the Association of 'Former Meek People.'"

"Thank you, Mr. Bayley. As a former meek person, I can assure you that the meek will probably never inherit the earth."

"Why not?"

"Because it doesn't pay to be meek. The meek are fed up, dropping out, and dying off. As the world gets tougher, the meek get weaker. The meek are an endangered species."

"For one thing, who wants to put up with all the indignities? Meek people are ignored by waiters, ridiculed by cartoonists, exploited by salesmen, crushed by crowds, and in a massage parlor all they can get is a massage."

"Meek people aren't even talked to by barbers or beauticians. They are disregarded by doctors, sneered at by police, slighted by..."

"Sorry to interrupt, Mr.

Muffin, but..."

"That's another thing. Meek people are always being interrupted."

"Sorry. I just wanted to..."

"Don't do it again, buster!"

"All right! I said I was sorry. I just wanted to ask what your organization does for its members."

"We teach people how to be tough. How to assert themselves. How to avoid being used as doormats."

"We teach members how to elbow their way onto trains and buses, how to push their way to the counter in a crowded store, how to yell until they get service, how to grab parking spaces — how to intimidate all the people who used to intimidate them."

"How successful have you been?"

"I'm proud to say that among our members who used to be meek people you will find salesmen, police, a couple of congressmen, a business tycoon, a movie director, a maitre d', and even a Marine drill sergeant."

"But Mr. Muffin, does the world need more tough people?"

"Of course not, Mr. Bayley. The world is teeming with tough people. But why should the meek be the only minority group that isn't organized and asserting its rights? We've watched everybody else organize — the blacks, Indians, Puerto Ricans, Chicanos, Jews, Irish, Arabs, women, gays, lesbians."

"Anyway, some of us meek people finally decided that it was time to stand up and be counted, to demand our rights, to toot our own horns, to put our feet down, to..."

"I'm sorry to interrupt again, Mr. Muffin, but we do have a time problem. Can you give us..."

"Didn't I tell you not to interrupt me, Bayley? Are you asking for a fat lip?"

"Please calm down, Mr. Muffin. We have time only for a few words from you on the state of the meek all over the world."

"Well, as I said earlier, they're an endangered species. The meek are as rare as modest politicians. Trapped between militant extremist groups, the meek are either joining us or going underground — sometimes permanently."

"Look at the upcoming elections here in the U.S. The meek haven't got a single candidate. Politicians are all trying to sound like police chiefs. Since Lincoln it hasn't been chic to be meek."

"So there's no chance of the meek inheriting the earth?"

"A slight chance, maybe. If there are any meek people around when the tough people get through with the earth, they might inherit it. But by then who would want it?"

Ford's Image Problem Remains

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There are moments presidents must treasure privately and Gerald R. Ford can be excused joyous memories of skiing last month with three members of the press.

It happened in Vail, Colo., shortly after Ford was pictured tumbling in the snow on skis.

Picking himself up, Ford invited the three best skiers among the news media to ski the slopes with him. A newspaper reporter, a photographer and a broadcaster were selected and for three hours took repeated tumbles while Ford himself never lost his feet.

The event, alas for Ford, was non-news.

The public has little interest in hearing about members of the press being folk who are "amiable bumbler," who cannot move with grace while chewing gum, etc.

But Ford, whom the White House reporters generally regards as perhaps the most physically able of modern chief executives, cannot bump an elbow or stumble a step without Great Political Truths being read into the act.

This gum chewing logic leads to the assumption that Ford missing an airliner step in Vienna proves positively that he is inept in foreign affairs. It is nonsense, of course.

Presidents however must get used to such ways of judgment. For example, there is the book-reading rule of thumb.

This holds that a President's worth can be measured by what books he reads. But White House book watchers, although unearthing reports that Franklin D. Roosevelt and Dwight D. Eisenhower were supposed to have been addicted to Zane Grey westerns and John F. Kennedy to James Bond thrillers and Harry S. Truman to the deeper histories and Lyndon B. Johnson to FBI reports, have been fairly stumped by Ford.

It has been noted that on Ford's Oval Office bookshelves sit books on Polish folk art, Vince Lombardi's football tactics, Abraham Lincoln's thoughts and Henry A. Kissinger's doings. But, still, the verdict of the book watchers on Ford is still out.

Ford is, like most Presidents, a hungry reader. With him it is an old habit. A man who was in Ford's car pool during the President's early congressional years reports that Ford would emerge from his house each morning with a stack of papers which would be devoured before the auto reached the Capitol. He said Ford looked up only when the car talk turned to sport.

Ford has suffered from an image among some critics of being none too brainy. He had to undergo the ordeal of actually being asked publicly, on television, if he really was smart enough to be President.

More nonsense, of course. As has often been pointed out, anyone who, like Ford, has been graduated from the Yale Law School cannot lack brains.

Still, there is for Ford an image problem. Rogers C.B. Morton, talking to reporters upon becoming Ford's chief White House political lieutenant, acknowledged it.

For the myth of the amiable bumbler rides on. It lives on despite the fact that Ford, right or wrong, managed the past year to thwart rather frequently the policy attacks of a Democratic majority in Congress big enough to override any veto.

It lives on despite the fact that Ford, right or wrong, managed to put Watergate and the Vietnam War in the American past.

It lives on despite the fact that Ford, right or wrong or because of him or in spite of him, has presided over a rise in the economy.

The fact would seem to be that Ford should be judged neither a physical folly nor a mental midget. The fact would seem to be that Ford should be judged at the polls on his political record.

Which is what he wants, to be judged on his record and not on his gum-chewing repete.

The Way to Win

Plan and Work Equal Success

By Mike Rothenberger

He was born in 1812, the son of a poor laborer who lived in Landport, England. Through his early years he lived in dire poverty. His father was constantly looking for work, but try as he would he was never able to get a good job and he was finally thrown into prison because he could not pay his debts.

At that time the boy was only ten years of age but he was forced to take a job in a damp, dingy factory, pasting labels on bottles of shoe blackening. He slept in the filthy attic of an old, rundown house with two other boys who were said to be guttersnipes.

His formal schooling amounted to a total of only four years. However, he took advantage of every possible opportunity to study and read books in the public library because he had a burning desire to become a great writer. He began to write stories at an early age and when his first manuscript was finished he sneaked out in the dead of night to mail it to a publisher. He was so timid that he was afraid for anyone to know what he was doing for fear they would laugh at him.

Story after story was rejected and then came that memorable day when one was accepted. He was paid nothing for it, but he was so happy that he walked aimlessly around the streets of the city for hours with tears of joy running down his face. His next eight stories brought him absolutely nothing in terms of money. And when he was finally paid for a story the sum was only $5, but the last manuscript he wrote brought his estate the fabulous sum of $15 a word.

We have all heard of this man many times. His name was Charles Dickens. He became the best-loved and most idolized man of his day. Once, when he visited America, people stood in line for hours, shivering in the wintry cold, as they waited to buy tickets to hear him speak. One of the leading encyclopedias has allotted more than five large pages to the account of his colorful career.

Authorities in the field of psychology have been saying for years that the average person never develops or uses more than a very small per cent of his potential ability. Dr. William James, once Professor of Psychology at Harvard University, used to say, "What the average person does, compared to what he could do, is like comparing the waves on top of the ocean to the ocean's mighty depth."

The pages of history reveal the names of many men and women who have achieved great success in spite of overwhelming odds against them. But we don't have to read history books to find stories of success. All we need to do is to look around us and we will find that some of the people right in our own communities have achieved a worthwhile measure of success because they were willing to plan and work and make good use of the talents that nature had given them. Almost any normal human has far more ability than he ever uses.

It is not then a matter of what we can do but a matter of what we will do with the potential ability that is ours, the talents that are ready and waiting for us to put them to good use.

That the courses are sound and up to date, the instructors are well qualified and use effective teaching methods, and participants gain worthwhile benefits. Our inquiries show that John Heron, manager of the Institute, enjoys a solid reputation in the Albany area."

High Falls Slates Full '76 Celebration

HIGH FALLS
The High Falls Civic Association initiated the bicentennial year with a flag-raising ceremony, held in Grady Park in High Falls. Donald Ross was master of ceremonies at the January 1 festivity.

The bicentennial flag, donated by Tom and Priscilla Lynch, was raised by Otto Feth, one of High Falls' oldest residents. The new 30 ft. flag pole, given by John Novi, is topped by a special oak ball designed and constructed by Don Dales. It is set in a millstone belonging to the Delaware and Hudson Canal Society with cement courtesy of Miron of Kingston and decorative stone from Barry Ayers.

The next event scheduled by the Bicentennial Celebration Committee will be a Ground Hog Party February 3rd featuring the Brass Creation Band. The party will be held at the High Falls Firehall at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available at local High Falls merchants.

According to the Bicentennial Celebration Committee, plans are being formulated for more activities during the Bicentennial year. They include a skate-in and picnic, a fly-in at the end of April, and the showing of new exhibits at the D&H Canal Museum, which will include a slide show. In addition, the D&H Canal Society is planning to show a documentary film made in New Paltz entitled, "The Canawler."

The culmination of the Bicentennial activities will be a two day celebration July 3 and 4, including a block party, a large parade, and a greatly enlarged fireworks display.

Dear Abby

Adoptive Mother Wants to Renege

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a respectable, married, God-fearing person. Something has been weighing heavily on my conscience for nearly 20 years, and I hear that you can help me to make things right with the Lord.

When I was between 12 and 13 years old, my mother was the church Ladies Aid treasurer. I used to take a dollar or two out of her "church purse" every now and then. I don't think she ever knew that money was missing. I figure that over the years I must have taken $25 or $30.

I want to give that money back to the church, but I don't want them to know where it came from. I heard that if I sent you a check for that amount, you would send the church your own check for the same amount without any mention of my name.

That way, they'd be paid back, and my conscience would be clear. Will you do it? God bless you.

GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY: Yes, I will. I have been the go-between for many who have stolen from their employers, friends, and even from their families. Make the check payable to me, and I will send my personal check to whomever you designate.

DEAR ABBY: I am a professional woman. I married five years ago and the marriage was going badly, so I adopted a child to hold the marriage together. That was a big mistake as I later learned.

We were divorced, and now I have met another man. He said he would marry me in a minute but he doesn't want a 4-year-old daughter. He is 50. I am 40.

The child is adorable and she deserves to be in a home where she is wanted. Please don't think I am a terrible mother, but I honestly don't have the time for her and I wasn't cut out to be a mother.

I love this man and want to marry him. What should I do about my daughter? I will be the first to admit that I am —
A POOR EXCUSE FOR A MOTHER

DEAR POOR: At least you're honest, which is to your credit.

It's not too late for the child to find adoptive parents who want her. Discuss this with your lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: This has been bugging me for a long time, so I finally decided to write to you.

Maybe I should tell you that I am a 13-year-old girl. Sometimes after dinner, our family talks over the events of the day. My mother will say to me, "Go out of the room for a minute. Your father and I want to talk about something."

Abby, if they want to talk about something in private, don't you think THEY should go out of the room?

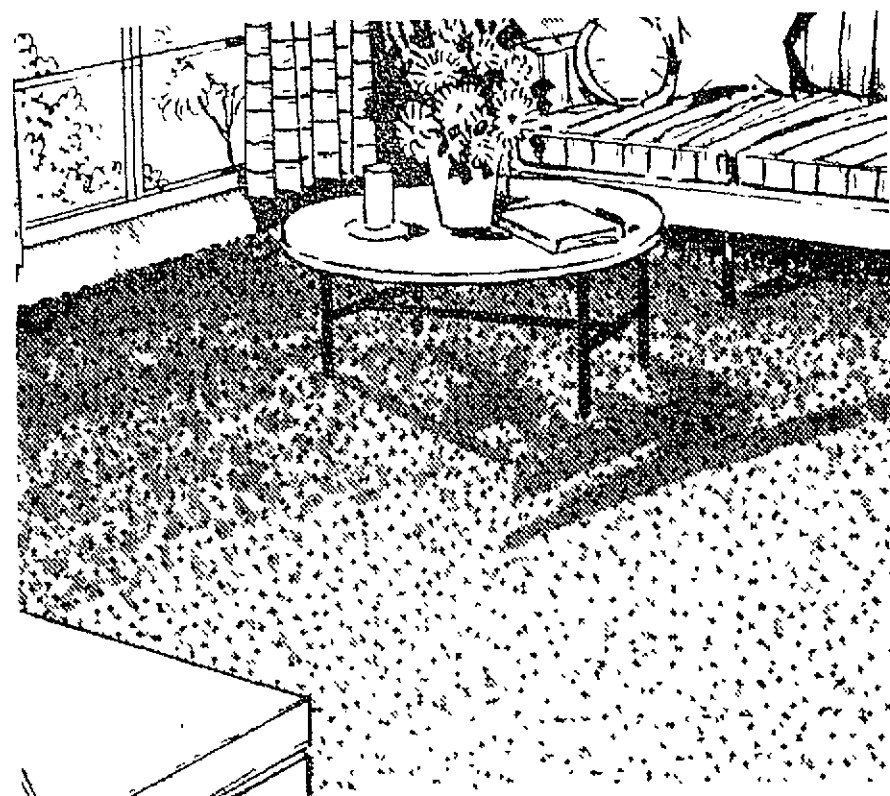

I have told them this but they won't listen.
PUSHED-OUT DAUGHTER

At Wit's End

For 15 Seconds Daily, I'm Great!

By Erma Bombeck

A couple of years ago on a talk show I heard actor John Cassavetes say something about marriage that made sense. He said, "Husbands and wives see one another at the worst possible times of the day. They don't get the best of one another and that is why so many marriages fail."

He's right, you know. The mornings are bad for me. During the night everything has wrinkled. My skin, the clothes to be worn that day, the lunch meat. The dog (who has kidneys the size of barley corn) is impatient to be let out.

The shoes that were left in the middle of the living room have moved on. The bread is frozen. While the kids shower, the mirror fogs up and my husband's beard goes limp. He's a bleeder.

I waste 20 minutes trying to make 35 cents out of two quarters and five pennies. My son mistakenly grabs the garbage (which he forgot to take out the night before) for his lunch and yells, "I'll eat it on the bus." My husband removes ice from the car with a pancake turner and scratches the windshield. He yells, "Have a good day!" and I yell back, "You have it! I had it yesterday."

When my husband comes home in the evening, I'm going downhill again. Once every three years I have sauerkraut for dinner. Once every three years he has it for lunch. It always falls on the same day.

One kid misses the bus and has to be picked up. The paper is late. I try to fix the toilet and bend the flange. An important phone message is written in yellow crayon on a paper towel and has one digit missing. Our water smells funny.

There is an open house at the school. Under the harsh lights I look like my grandmother, two days before her 75th birthday. We learn our children are average. One of them was caught flashing slides into the commode and then flushing so they would move to the delight of his schoolmates.

At home, there are no ice cubes. We missed the eleven o'clock news. There is snow forecast for the next morning. We cannot get the car in the garage.

In bed I say, "I wish you had been here earlier when I was fresh and scintillating."

"So, give me a call," he yawned.

"For 15 seconds," I sighed, "it's hardly worth it."

'Isis' in Woodstock Saturday Night

Isis, a high energy nine woman rock band, is coming to the Woodstock Town Hall Saturday at 7 p.m. under the auspices of the Woodstock Women's Center. Josh Mills of the Village Voice has called Isis "powerful, exciting music," "a no glitter, not gimmicky, no tricks" group. "They just go out there and slam the audience over with their music." "A mix between Chicago and Santana, but . . . better."

Isis, named after an Egyptian goddess of enormous strength and influence, has received rave reviews from Crawdaddy, Playboy, Cash Box and Rolling

Stone for their albums, ISIS and AIN'T NO BACKING UP NOW, both with Buddha Records. For the past two years Isis has performed in New York City rock spots, including the Bottom Line, the Other Rod, Trude Heller's and the Continental Baths.

Tickets for the concert, which is open to the public, will be on sale at the door before the performance. As Modern Hi-Fi said "Live Isis is simply shattering."

'The Merry Wives of Windsor' Opera in Ancram This Weekend

ANCRAM A three week Opera and Ballet Festival at the Johann Strauss Athenaeum will commence on Jan. 24th and 25th with Otto Nicolai's delightful comic opera THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR in English.

Norman Foster plays Falstaff in this colorful musical adaptation of Shakespeare's comedy. The plot concerns two married women, Mistress Ford (Colette Boky) and Mistress Page (Mildred Miller), both of whom have received love letters from Sir John Falstaff. Although aging and corpulent, Falstaff will consider himself to be an irresistible ladies' man. The two women conspire to have Falstaff caught by their husbands, and their plot results in many comic complications. The film features an international cast of opera stars; and Otto Nicolai's music is played by the Zagreb Symphony Orchestra.

Directed by George Tressler; produced by Norman Foster; screenplay and English translation by Foster, based on the opera by Otto Nicolai and the play by William Shakespeare; photography by Robert Hofer and Sepp Riff; music by Otto Nicolai. With Norman Foster Colette Boky, Mildred Miller. English dialog.

The week of Jan. 31st and Feb. 1st will have the ever-popular and beautiful Tchaikovsky Opera EUGENE ONEGIN in color and starring Ariadna Shengelaya, Svetlana Nemolyaeva, Vadim Medvedev, Igor Ozerov, Ivan Petrov, soloists, chorus and corps de ballet of the Bolshoi Theatre, Moscow, and the Kirov Academic Theatre of Opera and Ballet, Leningrad. Sung in Russian, with English subtitles.

Tchaikovsky's opera, based on the novel in verse by Pushkin, is brilliantly realized in this color film. Ariadna Shengelaya plays Tatiana, the modest provincial girl who becomes a noblewoman in 19th century Russia (the role is sung by Galina Vishnevskaya). This has been acclaimed as one of the finest opera films ever made.

The last week of the festival will have as its attraction, THE GRAND CONCERT in color.

Vera Stroyeva (Boris Godunov) directed this presentation of some of the U.S.S.R.'s outstanding artists of opera and ballet. A simple story provides the setting for "the grand concert."

This program is being presented as a part of the 52-week film schedule at the Johann Strauss Athenaeum (Operetta Museum). The museum is sponsored by the Gotham Light Opera Guild, Inc., a non-profit, tax-exempt organization which has established itself as the focal point for the preservation and promotion of operetta-light opera in America. For information call or write the Johann Strauss Athenaeum, New York, 12502.

St. Mary of the Snow Offers Marriage Encounter Night

SAUGERTIES A Marriage Encounter Information Night will be presented at St. Mary of the Snow School Hall in Saugerties on Sunday evening, Jan. 25th at 8 p.m.

Marriage Encounter is a practical experience, which teaches a sound technique of loving communication between spouses. It holds no boundaries as to age or religion, and is open to married couples of all faith denominations who have good marriages, but wish to achieve a new level of greatness in their marriage.

Marriage Encounter has swept the country in this past decade and weekend programs are presently being held in practically every state of the union. Each year more than 60,000 new couples experience the fine results which come from a Marriage Encounter weekend and a common commitment to seek greatness in their marriage.

The invitation to the Information Night is extended to all married couples who want a workable plan for making a great marriage a reality. Refreshments will be served following the presentation.

FDR Library Shows Variety of Portraits

HYDE PARK The Franklin D. Roosevelt Library has opened a new special exhibition entitled "FDR: Portraits With a Difference." It consists of 85 representations of President Roosevelt done in unusual mediums or techniques. Most of them are being shown to the public for the first time.

"We are accustomed to the way that the American public identifies with Presidents, showering them with handiworks of all kinds," said Dr. William Emerson, the Director of the Library. "These portraits are something else, done by foreigners as well as Americans, and by highly skilled professional artists as well as amateurs. If some of them smack of the 'grab-bag', others are remarkably inventive and sophisticated, capable of standing on their merit."

Among the professional works on display are a crystal paperweight head by Baccarat, a queen's ware bust by Wedgwood, a large oil portrait done in cubist style and a French portrait done in stained glass and lighted from behind. Also there are interesting works in textiles from Japan, China, Mexico, Belgium, France, and Russia. There are many items originally produced for commercial sale, such as plates, plaques, medallions, and ashtrays, "suggesting," Dr. Emerson observed, "that FDR's iconography became something like an international minor industry during the 1930's and 1940's, rivaling the Thomas a Becket industry of medieval times."

"In many cases, the work of amateur artists in this show yields nothing to the professionals in skill and invention," said Dr. James L. Whitehead, Curator of the Museum. "One portrait is made entirely of small bits of 2500 postage stamps, chosen for color and forming a remarkable likeness of FDR"

Meet the Conductor

These events are planned to give the community an opportunity to meet the conductor candidates in the philharmonic's search for a permanent music director.

There is no admission charge but reservations should be made by calling the HVP box office, 454-1224.

Sooner's Leroy Selmon Lombardi Award Winner

HOUSTON (UPI) — The selection of the Lombardi Award winner symbolizing the outstanding lineman in college football will be announced Thursday night and for two of the four finalists, it will be a chance to go one-up on their older brother.

Leroy and Dewey Selmon, both of the University of Oklahoma defensive line, will be honored at a black-tie awards dinner along with the other two nominees, Notre Dame's Steve Niehaus and Texas A&M linebacker Ed Simonini.

Leroy already was selected as United Press International lineman of the year and as the Outland Award winner for his play this past season. He was the favorite Thursday to win the award named for the late Vince Lombardi.

If Leroy or Dewey do win, likely there will be some good natured ribbing at the Eufala, Okla., home of Mr. and Mrs. Lucious Selmon the next time all of their sons are reunited.

Their oldest son Lucious, an Oklahoma all-America two seasons ago, was a finalist to win the granite block after the 1973 season, but John Hicks of Ohio State collected more of the votes cast by coaches and sportswriters.

Last year's winner, defensive end Randy White of Maryland, was named ahead of the fourth representative from the Sooners team to be selected finalist in four years, Rod Shoate.

Center Tom Brabney from the 1971 Oklahoma team was a finalist.

Jim Stillwagon of Ohio State was the first Lombardi winner, and Hicks' selection gave the Buckeyes two winners, more than any other school.

Notre Dame's Niehaus, the biggest of this year's finalists at 6-5 and 265, was the runner up to Leroy Selmon in the UPI lineman and Outland Trophy balloting. Should the defensive tackle from Cincinnati, Ohio, win, he would be the second Irish lineman to possess the Lombardi Award.

Walt Patulski won the 1971 voting.

Nebraska's Rich Glover took the 1972 honor.

Simonini, whose parents now live in El Paso, Tex., started four years at outside linebacker for Texas A&M.

His 123 tackles this season led the Aggies' defense, rated No. 1 in the country.

Leroy and Dewey Selmon played side-by-side in the Oklahoma defensive line, Dewey, who is 6-1, 257, played middle guard, and Leroy, 6-2, 256, played tackle on the national champion team.

Cronin Hedges On the Stand

EVERETT, Wash. (UPI) — Former American League President Joe Cronin returned to the witness stand today after admitting under pressing questions by the plaintiffs Thursday he had campaigned in Seattle for a bond issue to finance a new domed stadium.

Cronin, who termed himself "an old broken-down shortstop," was called as an adverse witness by the plaintiffs—Seattle, King County and the State of Washington—in the multimillion dollar damage suit against the American League over the loss of the 1969 Seattle Pilots.

Under nearly five hours of questioning by William Dwyer, chief attorney for the plaintiffs, Cronin hedged on the reasons he came to Seattle just before the bond issue vote.

"I was here to generate some baseball interest," he said in response to one question.

"I was here as a baseball Joe who wanted big league ball in Seattle," he replied to another question.

Dwyer finally quoted from a deposition Cronin had given under oath in 1972 in which the former A.L. president was asked:

"Now in expressing yourself in these ways... did

SPORT PARADE

Milton Richman,
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bill Bradley always talks about this dream of his. In it, he's playing in the NBA's All-Star game and he fast-breaks the entire length of the court, driving down the middle.

He is about to go up for his shot and put the ball through the strings when the dream nearly comes apart because he finds his route blocked by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Quickly switching the ball from one hand to the other in mid-air, the undaunted New York Knicks' forward classically outmaneuvers Jabbar and scores.

That's Bill Bradley's dream. But in real life, it never happens that way. Bradley has played in only one All-Star game, in Chicago in 1973, and none of the four points he scored were registered anywhere near the way they are in his dream.

When the first major league All-Star game was conceived by the late Arch Ward, former sports editor of the Chicago Tribune, it also was a dream, and a good one. The fans would have an opportunity to see the finest players all assembled on one field. In baseball it would be the American League's best against the National League's best and in football it would be the National Football League champions against the College All-Stars.

Fine, and there have been some outstanding games down through the years, but the only authentic honest-to-goodness All-Star "fan" I know now is Warren Giles, the National League's pink-cheeked, 79-year-old President Emeritus. The principal reason he feels so passionately about the All-Star game is because he still equates them in terms of league pride. The Nationals have been giving it pretty good to the Americans the past dozen years or so, having taken the last four in a row.

Warren Giles is strictly in the minority though, when it comes to any extraordinary enthusiasm for All-Star games in any sport, and in view of the latest one that was played in Philadelphia Tuesday night I'm beginning to wonder if there is any genuine need or reason for them at all. A number of fans tell me they feel the same way.

In Philadelphia Tuesday night, the Prince of Wales Conference conquered the Clarence Campbell Conference, 7-5, and if you have some trouble recognizing them by those names they were the National Hockey League's All-Star teams.

It was the 29th renewal of the game and turned out to be a near-disaster.

To begin with, most fans still do not relate to the fancy new conference names the NHL picked out for itself, so when you say the Prince of Wales Conference defeated the Clarence Campbell Conference, the reaction from nine out of 10 individuals is, huh?

Even some of the players in Tuesday night's game weren't sure which side they were on. They made jokes of the fact.

Then there was the game itself, an even bigger joke. There was so little action, the spectators booed. Some, who had paid as high as $13.50 a ticket, walked out as early as the second period. Montreal's Pete Mahovich, voted the game's MVP, admitted there wasn't much bodychecking in the contest.

"But you can't expect to see hitting in an All-Star game," he said, making it even worse. "Nobody wants to get hurt, so nobody hits anyone."

Mahovich might have added nobody in an All-Star game taxes himself doing much of anything anymore.

In that regard, perhaps it's unfair to single out the hockey All-Star game over the others. My own impression is that most such games, be they in baseball, basketball or football, have lost whatever original meaning they ever had. Worse yet, most of them have deteriorated into dull, boring exhibitions in which the players don't especially care to participate.

If the players don't care to show up, why should the fans, particularly when they're charged top prices for their tickets?

I think those fans who walked out in the second period in Philadelphia were trying to say something the other evening. Maybe what they were trying to say was that given the kind of performance they were getting, they've had enough All-Star games for awhile. I know I have.

Kingston at Poughkeepsie Should Be 'A Real Dilly'

KINGSTON

Kingston High's big win over Roosevelt Tuesday night did more than just keep the Tigers in a tight race for the DCSL championship. Because it was such a polished performance, it added a lot of lustre to Kingston's image, and now KHS will go to league leading Poughkeepsie tonight on psychologically even terms with the Pioneers.

The rest of the terms were pretty even to start with . . . Kingston, a 5-1 club, the defending champ and the best defensive team in the league . . . Poughkeepsie, an unbeaten club, the preseason favorite and the best rebounding team in the league.

"I expect a real dilly," said Pioneer coach Bob Stauderman. Nobody is going to disagree with that. Recent games between the schools have been good ones. Last season PHS won a double overtime thriller at home, then Kingston reversed the outcome on its court with a magnificent performance.

Stauderman was looking forward to a good season this year, and so far he's had it. "I've been impressed with the improvement we've shown," he said. "It's hard to compare this team to the ones we've had here in the past, and this year we haven't really started shooting, but we do rebound well and we have the depth. That's our strength."

Four players have done the bulk of the Pioneers' scoring so far. Dino Larry and Tony Johnson are the best of the shooters, and Stauderman feels they can do better. Tom McKinney and Clifton Grimes are also in double figures. Grimes carries a 15 per game rebound average as well.

Mike Daniels, a 6-4 reserve, has also helped out. "He's been a pleasant surprise," said Stauderman. "He's been coming off the bench and doing a good job, and last game he started and did well."

Despite the talents at his disposal, Stauderman is still very wary of the threat Kingston poses. He said, "I think Kingston is the team to beat in the league . . . I'm surprised Beacon beat them. They have three really quality players at guard, and I think the key for them will be how well their front line plays."

KHS' Mike Rienzo sees a few other things his squad will have to do. "We've got to stay out of foul trouble, we've got to help each other out on defense, and we have to stop their second and third shots."

That's a big order, getting all those jobs done, but Rienzo doesn't see any way around it. "You have to do your own laundry . . . if we want to win we have to beat the other teams. We can't sit around and wait for somebody else to knock them off."

The Tigers have no special plans for the Pioneers. "Kingston can't key on any one of us," noted Stauderman.

Rienzo will just send out his man-to-man and "adjust as we go along. We match up to them pretty good," he said.

FREE THROWS . . . Kingston also has four double figure shooters, Larry Carpenter, Don Timbrouck, Greg Glass and Daryl Mills . . . Poughkeepsie gym finally has a new scoreboard to replace its ancient, sweep hand clock . . . Top reserve guard Ray Tillery is out of Pioneer lineup indefinitely with an injury . . . Poughkeepsie still honorable mention in state school poll . . . Kingston unrated since loss to Beacon . . . Saugerties hosts Spackenkil, Ketcham is at Lourdes, Beacon visits Roosevelt and Arlington entertains Jay in DCSL games.

Keeping a Close Watch

Ulster, New Paltz Back In Action

KINGSTON

The holiday break is over and it's back down to the business of Region XV basketball for coach Mike Perry and his Ulster County Community College basketball team this weekend.

The Senators, 7-2 after their last action (a split at the Jamestown tournament) have a tough one tonight, meeting a strong Farmingdale club on Long Island. Tomorrow afternoon UCCC completes its met swing with a game at Fashion Institute.

New Paltz State is also in action over the weekend. The Hawks, who upped their record to 3-5 Tuesday night with a win over Maritime, are at White Plains tonight and home Saturday evening against Nyack. Saturday's 8 p.m. contest added Pete Yizar and Felix DelValle to their roster but have lost starting guard Randy Warner. The status of forward John Fortune is unclear.

Twenty-five acres of majestic parkland in the Town of Gardiner will be developed by the town as a memorial to the late George Majestic, town supervisor for the past 20 years.

The George Majestic Memorial Fund has been created to administer the development of the George Majestic Memorial Park, land purchased "a number of years ago for future recreational purposes," reports committee fund chairman Bert King.

He said the committee envisions a multi-purpose park for all age groups. Studies are being made to determine how best to develop the land.

King said, "I feel the committee represents a variety of views and interests and will also have the trust and cooperation of the community. He added, "I was very pleased that Mr. and Mrs. Frank Majestic and Town Supervisor Jack Bonagura were also at our meeting to provide us with information."

Other committee members are: T. H. Andersen, Dr. Virgil B. DeWitt, Dr. Clifford H. Hoppenstedt, Elizabeth T. Jones, the Rev. Rodney Koopmans, Msgr. Robert E. Moore and Ted Wright Sr.

George Majestic, who had been re-elected last November to his 10th consecutive term as supervisor, had many friends and associates in the Ulster County area. King said that anyone desiring to contribute to this memorial can do so by sending a check or money order to the George Majestic Memorial Fund, Box 1, Gardiner, N.Y. 12525.

It is hoped by the committee that sufficient funds might be raised to "enable all of us to achieve an objective which is not only a fitting memorial, but a living benefit to the people."

Nyquist Calls For Jobs, Reform

NEW PALTZ — "Welfare and the poor are easy targets for politicians seeking scapegoats during a period of economic recession," newly elected Legislator Thomas Nyquist (D-Dist. 8) says at the same time calling for better employment opportunities as well as welfare reform.

Nyquist suggested that "some of those who have justifiably expressed concern about the welfare situation in Ulster County, including legislators miss a very basic point. Our high welfare costs are partly a result of local factors," he suggested.

"The economy of the county is sick and has been for a long time," he said, pointing out that "job opportunities have been persistently poor, with unemployment figures well above the national average for years and years."

A member of the legislature's Social Services Committee, Nyquist feels the county board should make a concerted effort to attract proper kinds of industry to the county and to give serious consideration to such proposals as federally-funded work projects.

Referring to a bill now on President Ford's desk for signing, he said it would provide $4 1/2 billion for use by local governments of more than 50,000 where unemployment is above average. Sponsored by Ulster County Rep. Matthew McHugh (D-27th Dist.) the proposal would allow local governments to plan and administer approved projects.

Back In The Swing

Actress Rita Hayworth, 57, demonstrates her golfing technique to the press at Arkley, England. She is to appear in the Russell Harty chat show on British television Saturday. Apparently the glamor star of 1940's and 50's has regained her composure after and airplane incident earlier this week. Conflicting reports surrounded her disheveled debarkation from TWA 747 at Heathrow Airport upon arrival from Los Angeles. (UPI)

A Chaplin Come Home

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Geraldine Chaplin was 8 when her father whisked his family away from Hollywood, and while Charlie Chaplin never wanted to return, his daughter would like to live here again.

But for the moment that's impossible.

Geraldine, a tiny gamin with enormous eyes and a brilliant smile, lives with Spanish director Carlos Soura who only makes movies in Spain.

They are unmarried because Carlos can't get a divorce in his native land. They also are the parents of a year-old son, Shane.

"I suppose we will continue to live in Madrid as long as Carlos is determined to make movies about middle class Spaniards," she said somewhat forlornly. "Or until they throw us out."

Happily, Geraldine is enjoying a resurgence in her career. She has made five movies in the past year, all but one of them requiring her to leave Spain, her home for the past 11 years, taking Carlos and Shane with her.

"I did 'The Revenger' for Jacques Rivette in France, 'Buffalo Bill and the Indians' for Bob Altman in Canada, and 'Raise Crows' for Carlos in Spain," she said.

"Three different pictures in three different languages for the three best directors in the world. I'm very proud of that."

She is delighted by the twofold benefits of her work. It gets her out of Spain in addition to stocking the family larder.

Demand for her talent also has quelled Geraldine's self-doubts.

"When I did 'Dr. Zhivago' I thought I would become a star and be inundated with offers for all the best pictures," she said, poking fun at herself.

"But I imagine my acting left a great deal to be desired. I went through a period when I didn't work at all for a year or two. Not that I was turning down parts. I simply wasn't offered anything."

"Even now, I think every role I play will be my last."

Geraldine is in Hollywood to star in "Welcome to L.A.," Altman's latest film. Carlos and Shane are with her. When the picture is completed she will stop by Switzerland to visit her parents before returning to Spain.

"The old insecurities are still with me," she said, smiling. "I have no film in sight when this one is over. I'd like a period of inactivity if I knew for sure I had a job in the future. But I don't."

"I look forward to visiting my father and mother. Shane is grandchild number 10 for my parents. Even so, Dad is very fond of him. Maybe it's because I am the first daughter and waited until I was 30 to have my first child."

Lew Ayres Documentary—Labor of Love

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Lew Ayres has fulfilled his life as few actors have through a deep personal dedication to religion which manifests itself in his new movie, "Altars of the World."

The 2½ hour documentary on the world's religions was a labor of love, shot by Ayres himself over the past 20 years, tramping from one continent to another at his own expense.

The footage consists of rites, interviews, shrines, churches, temples, music and chants. But more importantly, the philosophy of religious concepts is presented in understandable terms.

Ayres is using Los Angeles as a test. If "Altars of the World" does well at the Los Angeles Music Center during its three day stand — Jan. 30, Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 — he will take it to other cities in the United States.

"I'll see what the public response is," said the quiet, graying actor.

"The film is an unknown factor to people. They're not sure whether it's an evangelistic effort on my part.

"This picture is a study of comparative religions. People who haven't time for a course in the subject at a university would like it very much. But it is also for laymen."

"I hope I've made the subject palatable, entertaining, instructional and authentic."

Ayres is a serious religious scholar and has been for 45 years.

He was vilified as a coward by many in World War II when he declared himself a conscientious objector to military service. It might have ended his flourishing acting career.

Ayres' sincerity became apparent, however, when he served nearly four years in a noncombatant assignment as an assistant chaplain and medic. He made three D-Day beachhead landings, including the historic invasion of Leyte in 1944.

These days Ayres appears as a guest star four or five times a year on television series, now and then landing a role in a TV movie.

But his passion is religion. His library is crowded with volumes on the world's faiths. He's also absorbed by mythology and psychiatry. He has read the entire works of Carl Jung.

Ayres believes in a strong personal God and speaks in defense of all religions although he belongs to no church himself.

Inevitably he is asked why so many people throughout history have been killed in the name of religion. He has an answer.

"You must define the terms of religion first," he said. "There are three views, the church as an institution, the people who follow it, and religious teachings."

"The teachings, of course, are the most important. It is people and institutions who have distorted the teachings for secular reasons."

"Differences in religions aren't the reason for wars or the separation of people Bigotry begins with economics, group loyalty, envy and resentment of material goods which are then blamed on religion."

Ayres, 67, knows his subject well. He has traveled to Japan, India, Pakistan, Hong Kong, Burma, Egypt, Israel, Turkey, Jordan and throughout Europe studying religion.

His "Altars of the World" focuses on Hinduism, Buddhism, Shinto, Islam, Sikhism, Zoroastrianism, Judaism and Christianity.

"Our young people are turning to Asian religions to satisfy an inner need for verification of the great teachings we are asked to believe in our western religions," Ayres said.

"Eastern believers don't worship together like we westerners do. They don't all go to temple or church at one time. Rather they contemplate as individuals and worship when they feel the need for it."

Ayres is heedful of the impact of the religionless governments of China and the Soviet Union on the world and suspects the movement may help the diverse religions on earth resolve their differences.

Personally, his studies and travels have given Lew Ayres a unique tranquility. Once senses about him a deep contentment, much of which he gained studying the religions of Asia.

"I have a deep commitment to God," he said. "Prayer is a vital part of my existence."

"I have no quarrel with the universe. I see a great over-spreading divine justice which exists in life. I have found this concept a bond among religions."

Bit Parts: Burt Reynolds plays a cameo role in "Silent Movie" which stars Marty Feldman ... Burl Ives will host NBC-TV's "The Great Easter Bunny" special in April ... Carol Burnett and Helen Reddy will entertain at a White House dinner Jan. 27.

Woods Stroll on Sunday

RHINEBECK Instructions on how to dress for a cold-weather outdoor experience were issued today for persons planning to attend the walk and talk program on "Exploring the Winter Woods" starting at 2 p.m. Sunday in the nature area of the Chancellor Livingston School, Knollwood, Rhinebeck.

The program open free to the public, is sponsored by the Outdoor Education Advisory Committee of the Rhinebeck Central School. The walkers will be led by Peter Dykeman, Educational Coordinator of Cary Arboretum and a member of the Advisory Committee, to look for tracks and other signs of plants and animals in their winter habitats. Length of the walk will be adjusted according to weather conditions, with part of the afternoon devoted to a slide talk in the cafeteria of the school.

Dykeman suggests that participants wear head covering and scarf, to prevent heat loss from the head and neck. Keeping the head covered, he said, helps force heat to the extremities and aids in keeping hands and feet warm. He recommends leather boots, or rubber boots over a pair of sturdy shoes, with at least two pairs of woolen socks, to insulate the feet from cold.

Your Astrograph

For Saturday, Jan. 24, 1976

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone extremely fond of you is likely to support your position against all odds today. Try to be equally loyal to her.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You feel very strongly about your opinions today. You are probably right. Since you will prevail, be compassionate with others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't be intimidated by tasks that may have seemed insurmountable in the past. Your reservoir of strength makes you equal to them today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be especially solicitous of those under your wing today. They'll be grateful. You'll be a better person because of it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Once you sense your basic inner strength, you'll be able to handle any situation, even though others may think you're a pushover.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You require mental challenge to satisfy your ego today. Unless you're intellectually fulfilled, you won't relax.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Reason must not give way to emotion today in material affairs. You understand balance better than anyone. Remember this.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're apt to believe you should be leading the parade today, and why shouldn't you? Those in front are those who are confident of their abilities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Quiet places will be to your liking today. Everyone needs a respite at times. Solitude now beckons to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be receptive to new ideas today. Don't turn a deaf ear to unheralded projects, even though they may seem too innovative at first.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you happen to wind up second-best today, it's because you didn't try hard enough. First place is yours if you extend yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Experience is an able teacher. It can be especially so for you today. Recall. You have a wealth of background to draw upon.

Jan. 24, 1976

You will be much more inclined to assert yourself this coming year. Where you have been reticent in the past you will now take charge — and you should.

Jean Adams TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams, Ph.D.

NOSE? (Q) I read your column every day and all I hear about is 13-year-olds having trouble with their boy friends. They're lucky to have any boy friends at all. I don't have one.

I have a big nose and everybody teases me about it and I think that's the reason I don't have a boy friend. There's this ninth grade boy that I am dying to get to notice me. I am in eighth grade. How can I get a boy friend? —Unprivileged in Pennsylvania

(A.) Some 13-year-old girls without boy friends blame it on big feet or big hands. In my opinion it's not either; it is just that the time is not yet right.

The time will soon be right for you. Forget your nose and be friendly to the boys you like, including that ninth grader.

AFRAID (Q) I have liked Jo for about two years, but when I see her I turn my head and act like I don't see her.

And at the dances I am afraid to ask her to dance. All my friends tell me that she likes me and urge me to go up and talk to her but I am too afraid. —Chicken in Alabama

(A.) Can you imagine what all this makes Jo think? She almost certainly thinks you don't like her and are purposely ignoring her.

You would both be happier if you could forget yourself and smile at her and talk when you see her. Do this, and when you do, tell her frankly about your shyness. I believe she will be glad to help you overcome it.

Being shy and inward is a form of selfishness. You don't give people a chance to be friendly. You cut them off. Cutting people off displeases them. Forget your fears and think about pleasing Jo.
